

I ANTROPOLOGIA FEMINISTA KONGRESUA
(1st Feminist Anthropology Conference)
Transforming knowledge: Inhabiting awkwardness
Transformando el conocimiento. Habitando la incomodidad
Ezagutza eraldatuz. Deserosotasuna biziz
Donostia-San Sebastián, 8-10 June 2022

-First circular-

After two years in which the pandemic caused by Covid-19 has prevented us from holding the 1st Feminist Anthropology Conference (the first feminist anthropology conference in the Spanish state), we would like to announce that we are once more organising the conference, which will be held on 8, 9 and 10 June 2022, with the same title: “Transforming knowledge: Inhabiting awkwardness”.

Despite the fact that during these last two years we have not been able to organise the conference, we did not want to miss the opportunity to reflect on the pandemic from the perspective of feminist anthropology, and in June 2021 we held the “Anthropology, Feminism and Pandemic” session, with a roundtable on “Feminism and pandemic: Reflections from the Social Sciences” and the pre-screening of the documentary titled Aitzindariak / Pioneras (Pioneers). The three protagonists of this film, Teresa del Valle, Dolores Juliano and Verena Stolcke, have been and continue to be important points of reference in our discipline. There is a summary of the session at the following link: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YGe-rv5Xflg>

Through this first circular, we want to give information about, on the one hand, the general approach of the conference and, on the other, the thematic panels envisaged, the start of the deadline to submit proposed papers and in order to carry our registration for the conference.

1. PRESENTATION OF THE CONFERENCE

Feminist anthropology emerged in the 1970s although beforehand there were already some significant antecedents. It is a theoretical frame which has had and has different names and theoretical-methodological developments, and also according to historical and geographical contexts, but which is applied to all kinds of subjects and fields of study. One of its main objectives is to transform both knowledge within and outside the discipline and in reality, so that one must react in the face of what has been established and transform discomfort into a conceptual, personal and political wager. In the Spanish state, it is a field that has grown a lot in recent decades, which is something that can be noted both in the activity of certain research groups and in its presence at anthropology conferences which are held occasionally.

As anthropologists at the University of the Basque Country (UPV/EHU), we believe that it is a good time to analyse and debate the current state of such studies together, focusing on the contributions which are being made, on different theoretical and methodological proposals, on relations with other disciplines, on the applied dimension and its insertion into society, and on the challenges which we face ahead.

In order to do so, we are organising a conference on 8,9 and 10 June 2022 in Donostia-San Sebastián. There will be four main focus points: genealogy, theory, methodology and relations with feminism and society in general. Likewise, the conference will include thematic panels for presenting the different research being carried out.

2. PUBLICATION OF THE THEMATIC PANELS

As well as roundtables and other general events, the conference will have 16 thematic panels for presenting different ongoing research and reflections. You will find more detailed information about all the panels on the conference website.

3. START OF THE DEADLINE TO SUBMIT ABSTRACTS

In order to take part by presenting papers on these panels, anyone interested should submit their proposals via the form for submitting papers on the website: <https://afit-antropologiafeminista.eus/>

Proposals sent in 2020 which were accepted will still be acknowledged, but they should be ratified or annulled via the submission form for papers. Any proposals which are not ratified within the deadline indicated will be annulled. In the event of submitting a new proposal, it will be subject to evaluation.

These are the conditions for the proposals:

- Each proposal submitted should indicate the panel for which it is registered; and should be accompanied in turn by a title, the name(s) of the author(s) of the proposal (up to a maximum of three people), the affiliation or institution to which they belong, a contact email address and the language in which the paper will be presented (the languages accepted are specified on each panel).
- The full text of the abstract must be between 175 and 300 words. Furthermore, between 3 and 5 keywords must be included. It should be in 12-point Arial font with 1.5 line spacing (or equivalent). The text should be attached to the form in

PDF format. The full text of the papers will not be requested either at the time of registration or at a later date.

- Each participant may author only two proposals for papers (whether as author or co-author). In the event that there are more than two proposals authored by the same person, the organisation will give them the chance to choose which one to withdraw. If we do not receive any response on their behalf, we will withdraw the last proposal received.
- Each proposal may be authored by up to a maximum of three people, but only one of them should register the paper in the form (although all the authors must register for the conference). All of them must appear in the text with the abstract which will be attached when submitting the proposal.

The deadline to submit proposals will begin on 23 December 2021 and end on 31 January 2022, both days inclusive.

Once proposals have been evaluated and accepted, participants will have to make a payment to register for the conference (if they did not already do so in 2020) and submit all the necessary documentation before 10 April 2022. Should they not do so, these proposals will be eliminated from the programme.

Please take care of the style, spelling, writing, technical vocabulary and content in the submitted abstracts, and follow the norms in regard to minimum and maximum number of words in the abstract, since this will be the information which the Scientific Committee takes into account when it comes to evaluating the proposals, and that which appears in the Conference Programme and on the certificates.
